What the Police Have Unearthed Regarding Crutchfield and His Victim-The Young Lady Details Her Flight From Home and Her Experiences Here.

On Tuesday last Chief-of-Police Davis reeived a startling telegram from Paris, Tenne see, of the following import: Panis, TENN., March 15, 1881.

Arrest and hold C. W. Crutchfield and Miss S.

Johnson.

The police machinery was at once put in motion, and in a short time Crutchfield wa: discovered on Main street, and was at once escorted to the police station. On his person was found a sum of money, $324. He was locked up for safe-keeping. The search made for Miss Johnson was unsuccessful, except so far as discovering something as to her movements. It was learned that she came in on the Sunday afternoon train from Paris, Tennessee, and was driven, according to her directions, to a baguio at No. 133 Main street, she believing it to be a respectable boardinghouse. She remained all night and next morning expressed her astonishment at having heard the lady boarders swear a litthe during conversation. She left the house and disappeared. On Tuesday night her brother arrived in the city, and he informed the chief of police that his sister had robbed

CHARGE OF GRAND LARCENY. Further investigation developed the fact that Crutchfield arrived in the city Monday morning, and went at once to No. 133 Main street, to which place he had directed the be-trayed girl. He was astonished to find her gone, and to be informed that before she left that morning she had inquired the way to the Louisville depot, saying she intended returning home. Crutchfield, who is about twenty-three rears of age, had a good deal to say on the subject. He informed the inmates of the house all about the affair, and remarked that he did not intend to marry the girl; that she had selected a bad life and might continue in He went in search of the girl, however, string several places of ill-repute, but could earn nothing. Yesterday morning young ohnson swore out a warrant against both his Johnson swore out a warrant against both his sister and Crutchfield, charging them with grand larceny. An entry of carrying concealed weapons was also entered on the police docket, two loaded pistols having been found on his person. The hearing of the cases was continued over to next Friday, to await the arrival of the girl's father. The money found on Crutchfield's person answered the description as given by young Mr. Johnson, even to the denomination of the bills.

OTHER PACTS IN THE CASE. From what could be gleaned from Mr. Johnson, it seems that Crutchfield was re-lated to the family and had been paying marked attention to Miss Johnson, but he had been forbidden the house by the girl's parents, they not desiring that their daughter should associate with him. Unfortunately, however, Crutchfield had seduced the girl and the fact could be leaved by and the fact could no longer be con-cealed by her, hence the elopement with Crutchfield. In conversation with the inmates of the bagnio to which he had sent the girl, she said he told her to go to Memphis where he had an uncle living, who was a physician, and who would produce an abortion upon her, but his directing her to a bagnio showed that he intended to debauch her mind as well as her person, and then desert her, leaving her to pursue a life of shame.

THE GIRL FOUND,

Sergeant Kuhnholz, of the police force, hile walking up Main street yesterday afternoon saw a young lady in a jewelry tore near Poplar street. She was purchasing some jewelry. She answered the description of the girl wanted. He went in and asked her if her name was not Miss S. B. John and if she did not come from Paris, Tennes see, last Sunday. The girl looked at him as son, and that she was from Louisville, Ken tucky. He arrested her and conducted her to the office of the chief of police, where she was interrogated, but she continued for some time to deny everything. At last she admitted that she was Miss Johnson, but said that Mr. Crutchfield had nothing to do with her leaving home and knew nothing of her com ing to Memphis, and that when arrested she was preparing to return home. One hundred and three dollars were found in her pocketbook, in explanation of which she said that after fixing the bed for her father on Satur being out on a visit to her brother's near by, she went into the next room took one hundred dollars in money she went into the next room, put on some traveling clothes, went out to Association; 6751, L. D. Grant vs Jesse A. the stable, saddled the poorest horse and rode forrest; 6758, Ike A. Chase vs Memphis twelve miles that night to Paris. She turned at a hotel till the train came along; then she came to Memphis. The reason why she left home, she said, was because her father and others made it disagreeable for her. The chief of police did not, of course, believe this story, so her brother was admitted, and a very ADMITTING EVERYTHING.

When she became calm, Chief Davis again stating that she went to Paris with she took from her father's bureau she gave $300 to Crutchfield and kept $205 He directed her to the place No. 133 Main street, saying that it was a boardinghouse, and that he would be in Memphis next day (Monday). The money found on Crutchfield's person by the police was, she said, her father's money. When she left the bagnio on Monday morning, she went out to hunt work and wandered up into Mrs. Jackson's millinery establishment in the same block nere engaged to work and purchased furniture for her room. This statement was con firmed by Mrs. Jackson, a respectable lady who knew nothing of the girl's troubles or history. She went out yesterday afternoon to buy some jewelry, when she was arrested. She had made purchases to the amount of $24, but the chief of police returned the jewelry and got the money back, which made $127 found in her possession and $324 found on Crutchfield, the total amount being $451 -a deficit of $54 from the $505, which wa spent in railroad fares and other incidental

Crutchfield had already secured a lawyer but the turn things took made the services of a lawyer of but little use, the evidence of guilt being clear against him. Through attorney yesterday afternoon, he proposed to marry the girl, and to that extent make rep aration for the great wrong he had inflicted upon her. The girl's brother was consulted about the matter, but he declined to consider the proposition, preferring to await the arrival of his father, who had been telegraph ed to at Paris to come to Memphis immed ttely. Mr. Johnson will arrive in the this morning when the matter will be duly THE IMPLICATED PARTIES,
